who have been timid because of the fate of their Chicago brethern will now take heart and be outspoken.

He predicted a growth of the Anarchistic sentiment that will give the organization standing with the great political parties in this country and will eventually place them in control.

"We will go into politics now," he said. "That is the way we won in Chicago, and we will win in that way in New York."

John Burtag, another Anarchistic orator, was equally confident that Gov. Aliged's action will give a boom to the cause in New York.

"Gov. Altgeld and Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, are both our friends, and we will now get friends of standing in New York."

Supt. Byrnes had just finished reading a synopsis of Gov. Aligeid's statement when seen by an "Evening World" reporter, who asked if he thought that the pardoning would give encouragement to the New York Anarchists.

Byrnes hesitated a moment, and then said he had no opinion to express.
"Do you not think Gov. Aligeid exceeded his authority, or at least acted unwisely in criticising the Court that convicted the Anarchists?"
"I have an opinion," said the Superintendent, "a very vigorous opinion, but it would be out of place for me to express it."

He said at the time of the trial he thought some of the rulings unsound.

Foremost in securing the partion of Schwab, Fielden and Neebe was E. S. Dreyer, a Chicago banker and real estate operator, who was foreman of the Grand Jury that indicted them.

He said he believed Neebe, who was sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary, was innocent, and that Schwab and Fielden had been sufficiently punished.

Gov. Altgeld gave the pardons to Mr.

Dreyer and then sent a statement containing 17,000 words to the press.

In the beginning the Governor summarizes the events leading up to the trial, and the efforts to secure pardons. He then says:

"The record of the trial shows that the manner that juries usually are drawn—that is, instead of having a number of names drawn out of a box that contained many hundred names, as the law contemplates shall be done in order to insure a fair jury and give neither side the advantage, the trial Judge appointed one Henry L. Ryce as a special bailiff to go out and summon such men as Ryce might select to aet such men as Ryce might select to aet as jurors.

"It is shown that he boasted while selecting jurors that he was managing this case; the fellows would hang as certain as death; that he was calling such men as the defendants would have to challenges on, and that when their challenges on, and that when their challenges were exhausted they would have to take such men as the prosecution wanted. It appears from the record of the trial that the defendants were obliged to exhaust all of their peremptory challenges, and they had to take a jury almost every member of which stated frankly that he was prejudiced against them."

The Governor criticises Judge Gary thus:

"The State has never discovered who "The State has never discovered who it was that threw the bomb that killed the policemen and the evidence does not show any connection whatever between the defendants and the man who did throw it. The trial Judge, in overruing the motion for a new hearing and again recently in a magazine article, used this language: The conviction has not gone on the ground that they did have actually any personal participation in the particular act which cansed the death of Degan, but the conviction proceeds upon the ground that they had generally, by speech and print, advised large classes of the people not particular individuals, but large classes—to commit murder and had left the commission, the time and place and when to the individual will and whim or caprice, or whatever it may be, of each

This case is without precedent. There is no example in the law books of a case of this port.

The record of the case shows that the Judge conducted the trial with mental that is a man very bighly extended the consequence of the specific points touched defendants witnesses we there will be specific points touched defendants witnesses who permanent of subjects entirely foreign to that mental the specific points touched actions of subjects entirely foreign to that mental the specific points touched actions of the states attorney to go immediately the specific points touched the very units throughout the long trial on any constant of the property of the state of the record contains insinuating remarks and further, that page after page of the furth is yet full of the property of the property

Street from Lexington to Third avenue. The report was referred to the Comptroller.

The matter of repairing Third avenue, at a cost of $200.00, from the Harlem River to One Hundred and Seventieth street, under an act of the Legislature of 1831, then came up.

The late Commissioner Heintz estimated that the work could be done for the specified sum. The present Commissioner, Haffen, employed a city surveyor, and his estimate for the work is $200.00 from One Hundred and Thirty-eighth street, with a foundation part sandstone and part concrete.

"Where are you going to get the money from to pay the surveyor?" asked the Mayor.

"I'll pay for it myself," responded Haffen.

"We don't want city officials to pay for city work," the Mayor told him, "Get your own engines to do the work."

Mayor Gilroy favored a concrete foundation for the entire improvement, and Commissioner Haffen was instructed to advertise for bids to see if he could not get an offer for a concrete foundation not to exceed $200.000.

But Mrs. Safford Wants Time to Investigate Cook's Claim.

Safford's Suit for Divorce Is Therefore Adjourned

Judge McAdam listened to-day to the tale of domestic woe that disturbed the equanimity of the household of Joseph T. and Virginia Safford, and upon which dr. Safford asks for absolute divorce. Mr. Safford is a clerk at the Hotel Brunswick. He claims that his spouse had another husband. He says that after their marriage in 1889 he discovered that she had never been divorced from a former husband who now lives in Philadelphia.

The attorneys for Mrs. Safford

The attorneys for Mrs. Safford pleaded that this was a surprise to them, and asked for more time. Judge McAdam being informed that Mrs. Safford was in court, called her to the stand.

She testified that she was married fifteen years ago, but had not seen her first husband in thirteen years. Recently a man came to the house where she and her second husband, Mr. Safford lived, and claimed to be her former husband.

She testified that this man was in husband.
She testified that this man was in feature like her first husband, Franklin Harvey Cook, a plumber, but that the visitor was a blond while her husband was a brunette.

visitor was a blond while her husband was a brunette.

Testimony was taken by a commissioner in Philadelphia from F. H. Cook, in which Cook swore that he was married to the present Mrs. Safford in 1877, and they were never divorced.

Cook says in his deposition that he lived in New York at the time of the marriage, and that the ceremony was performed in Jersey City. His bride gave her name as Virginia Starr Rowland Cook was twenty years old at that time.

Mrs. Safford claimed that she had been informed that her long separation from her first husband freed her from all obligation under that marriage, and besides, she was not convinced of the identity of her recent caller with that of Cook, and she asked for time to investigate.
